WEST CHESTER _ Chester County author Bruce Mowday was named the Local Author Hero by the West Chester Library.

Mowday and the other category award winners were recognized at the Literacy Heroes breakfast held at Longwood Gardens on April 18, 2008.

“Bruce also presents lectures about local history for audiences at libraries, historical societies and civic organizations,” the Literacy Heroes breakfast program said. “In 2007, as a guest lecturer for the Chester County Library System’s Chester County Reads campaign, he gave talks on the connection between the Battle of Brandywine and the British troops’ subsequent occupation of Philadelphia at several libraries. His presentation helped the library system accomplish its 2007 goal of promoting Chester County history through reading and community activities.

“For his contributions to the Chester County community, Bruce Mowday, has been selected as the West Chester Public Library’s 2008 Local Author Hero.”
